I oppose this proposal. The idea of putting a giant animated billboard next to a major intersection that already has many accidents is ridiculous. We are bombarded with messages about distracted driving and the evils of even talking on one's phone while driving and yet somehow it is deemed ok to lure people's attention away from the road ahead and towards animated signs while they are approaching a major intersection at (often) highway speeds? Give your heads a shake! This is just another form of distracted driving.
